This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

The Board may, however, should they deem such an arrangement desirable, designate some one of the rooms of the Athenæum, which may be used as a room for conversation.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

Upon the appearance of a new and complete Catalogue of "THE PROVIDENCE ATHENÆUM," it seems proper to give an historical sketch of the origin of the Institution, and of its progress up to the present time, compiled from the records, and from the annual reports of the Board of Directors.

The Providence Athenæum originated in a compromise, effected in the year 1836, between two previously existing Library Institutions, which had for some years divided the sympathies and support of the community, and which experience had shown could not both be successfully maintained. It was accordingly agreed, after ineffectual attempts to unite them, that each should surrender its separate existence for the purpose of forming a new and enlarged Institution.

These two Institutions were, "The Providence Library Company," formed in 1753, but not incorporated until 1798, and "The Providence Athenæum," formed and incorporated in 1831. The following brief account of them is mainly derived from the notes appended by the late Professor GODDARD to the first annual report of the present Athenæum.

"The Providence Library was for nearly eighty years the only public library established for the benefit of the people of Providence and its vicinity. In an "Introduction to the Charter and By-Laws of the Providence Library Company," published in 1818, may be found a brief history of that institution, prepared by the venerable John Howland, of this city, who yet lives to witness the successful results of several valuable institutions over whose infant destinies, in years long past, he assisted in watching. This history is given below in the words of Mr. Howland."

"The Providence Library was first established in this town in the year 1753, * and placed in the Town House, in which the Courts and the General Assembly of the colony then held their sessions. On the night of December 24th, 1758, the house, together with the Library, except about seventy volumes which were in the hands of proprietors, was consumed by fire. † In 1762, by the great exertions of several of the proprietors, it was re-established by the importation of books from London, a catalogue of which had been sent out by their Committee. ‡ In 1764, the books by permission of the General As-

* The following is an extract from the Preamble to the subscription to raise a fund to establish the Providence Library, dated March 22, 1753: "Whereas a collection or Library of useful and edifying books will most certainly tend to the benefit and instruction of the inhabitants of this town and county of Providence, and the rising generation thereto belonging; therefore, we the subscribers, considering the advantages thereof, and the improvements which may be thereby made, not only by us but by our posterity, and for the encouragement of the same, have hereunto voluntarily subscribed our names, and opposite thereto such sum of money as we are willing to contribute towards the useful and laudable design aforesaid."

† This Town House was situated on the lot now occupied by the public school house on Meeting-street. The records of the old Providence Library contain the following particulars concerning this fire: "The books being arrived from England, neat and proper cases were erected in the Council Chamber, in the Town House in Providence, for receiving them; and being placed in their proper order, the Library was opened, and the books received and returned by the proprietors, agreeable to the foregoing rules, and continued to be used in that manner, to great satisfaction, as well as profit and advantage, until the twenty-fourth day of December, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-eight, when the Town House with all the books in it was entirely consumed by fire. This accident was occasioned thus. The General Assembly sitting in the Court House the preceding week, when the weather was very cold, large fires were kept in the chambers. The chimneys, not being built from the ground, but founded on the chamber floors, were supported by timber, to which the fire communicated itself through the hearths, and there remained concealed, from Saturday, when the Assembly left the house, until the Sunday following, about ten o'clock at night, when the inside of the house was discovered to be wholly in flames. The fire being got to so great a height, it was impossible to save the house or any thing in it. One dwelling house also which stood next to it was burnt down. The Friends' Meeting House, and another house which stood near it, suffered great damage by the fire, but were saved by the diligence and great activity of the people, with the help of one water engine, the only one then in the town."

‡ The Library being thus lost, except about seventy volumes, then abroad in the hands of proprietors, application was made to the General Assembly, who at their session in the month of February one thousand seven hundred and sixty, granted a Lottery, the deduction from which, namely one thousand dollars, to be appropriated to the purchasing books for a new library, of which books when purchased, the proprietors of the former library were to be the owners, together with all such others who should take sixty tickets apiece on their own risk, in this Lottery. The Lottery sembly, were placed in the Council Chamber in the new Court House, when the expense of finishing the east end of that elegant room was paid by the Library Company for the privilege of keeping the books in this place; and it was further agreed that the members of both houses of the Assembly should have the use of the books during their sessions here. * In the year 1770, Rhode-Island College was established in this town, and the college edifice erected the same year. On this occasion, the Library Company offered the use of the books to the officers and students of that institution, until a Library could be procured sufficient for that respectable establishment. Under these circumstances and from the doors being left open to accommodate the members of the Legislature, other persons, in the absence of the Librarian, had access to the books; many of which were lost, and the value and usefulness of the Library were evidently declining; and the proprietors, having no corporate powers, had not sufficient authority to enforce a compliance with their votes and regulations. It was therefore determined to apply to the General Assembly for an act of incorporation; and, on that being obtained, to adopt such other measures to preserve the books and increase their numbers as might render the institution more useful and respectable, and to bear some proportion to the progressive increase of the town. Application was accordingly made to the Assembly, and the charter of incorporation was granted in October, 1798.

"Sometime after the charter was obtained, subscriptions were opened for new shares for the purpose of increasing the Library; and a considerable number of books were added; but experience having proved that the valuable objects contemplated by the liberal spirit of being completed, one thousand dollars were delivered to a Committee appointed by the proprietors for that purpose, who sent it in Bills of Exchange to Mr. John Richardson, a stationer in London, together with a catalogue of books to be purchased, who procured and shipped them to Boston, where they arrived some time in the month of January, 1762."

"On the ninth day of February 1762, the books were brought into town from Boston, and put up in order in Mr. Esek Hopkins' shop."—Extracts from Providence Library Records.

* "1764. This day the Library was removed from Mr. Esek Hopkins's, where it hath been kept ever since it arrived from England, into the Council Chamber, where proper, and very neat shelves, with large panelled doors, were put up at the charge of the proprietors, and so contrived, as not to take from the beauty of the whole finishing of the chamber, which is elegantly done in Belection Work. For the privilege of keeping the books in this place, the members of the General Assembly are to have the inspection of the books, during their session here."—Providence Library Records.

the proprietors could not be realized while the Library remained in a place so inconvenient, and to which the proprietors had access only a few hours in each week—measures were taken, in the year 1816, to add to the Providence Library a very respectable literary establishment, which had been purchased by a number of gentlemen in this town, and for admitting them as proprietors, on their transferring the same to the corporation. This desirable object having been effected, the books of the company were removed from the State House and placed in the new Library Room. It then became necessary to apply for further powers and for such alterations in the act of incorporation as a change of circumstances had rendered necessary and proper; and at the session of the General Assembly held in February, 1817, the act, altering and amending the charter, was passed."

"Thus far Mr. Howland. The original act of incorporation was farther amended by an act passed Oct. 1818. Under this charter, as amended, the Providence Library Company continued in being till it was merged, by its own consent, in the Athenæum. It appears from a printed catalogue of the books belonging to the Providence Library, in the year 1768, that the total number was nine hundred and eleven volumes. In this number comparatively few works of fiction were to be found, the age of cheap editions and of pens prolific in works of fancy, not having then dawned upon the world. When it is considered that the original Library was nearly all destroyed by fire in the year 1758, and that in the year 1768, the population of Providence was only 3869, a collection of substantial books, belonging to a private association, and numbering nearly one thousand volumes, speaks well for the liberality and taste of our forefathers. In 1798, as appears from the act of incorporation, Jabez Bowen, Moses Brown, William Richmond, John Smith, Nicholas Brown, Joseph Jenckes, and Paris Jenckes Tillinghast, were the Standing Committee of the Providence Library Company. It appears from the same instrument, that these persons, together with Joseph Tillinghast and Theodore Foster, were appointed the Directors of the Library, until a new election should be made pursuant to the act of incorporation."

The first Record Book of the Providence Library Company, from which extracts have been given, is in the possession of the Athenæum. It contains the original subscription made to found the Library, with the names of the subscribers and the amounts of their subscriptions; and also two catalogues, one of the books originally purchased, and the other, of those purchased after the fire, and those saved in the hands of the proprietors. It also contains a list of the proprietors in 1762, including those who became such by purchasing tickets in the Lottery.

There exists also a manuscript catalogue, dated October 15, 1816, which was probably after the accession of books above mentioned as having been made in that year. By this catalogue it appears that the Library then contained 194 folios and quartos, 1148 octavos, and 450 duodecimos and smaller, total 1792 volumes; and from a list appended, it appears that there were at that time 273 proprietors, owning 292 shares. The Library room mentioned above, to which the books were removed from the Council or Senate Chamber of the Court House, and where they continued to remain until merged in the Athenæum, is well remembered by most of our citizens. It was in the third story of the building owned and in part occupied by the Washington Insurance Co., and which in the year 1844 was demolished, and their present building erected on the same spot.

The Providence Library had now for some years fallen into great neglect. Its affairs were very carelessly managed, and no new books were added. This led to the formation of the other institution, from which the present one derives its origin, the first Providence Athenæum, which "was incorporated by the General Assembly of Rhode Island, at its June session, 1831, and went into operation on the 18th of June of the same year. The only names mentioned in the act of incorporation are those of Cyrus Butler, John Mackie, Charles Dyer, and Richard W. Greene. Associated with these gentlemen in founding this public Library, and in subsequently conducting its affairs, were numerous others, some of whom were, at the same time, members of the Providence Library Company. From that time till its union in 1836 with the Providence Library, for the purpose of forming "an enlarged institution," suitable to the wants and creditable to the liberality and intelligence of the community, the Providence Athenæum steadily put forth all its energies for the accomplishment of the noble object which it was established to promote. Notwithstanding many circumstances adverse to its growth, it succeeded in making, if not a large, a very choice collection of books, which ultimately constituted by far the most valuable portion of the Library of the new institution, at the date of its origin. In order to show more fully who were concerned in the old Athenæum, it may not be amiss to add the names of those persons who were elected its officers on the 18th of June, 1831. They are as follows:—Tristam Burges, President; John Mackie and Frederick A. Farley, Vice-Presidents; Thomas H. Webb, Secretary; John R. Bartlett, Treasurer; Lemuel H. Arnold, Thomas Burgess, Richard J. Arnold, Thomas C. Hoppin, William T. Grinnell, Richard W. Greene, Charles Dyer, William Butler, John Taylor, and Stephen Tripp, Trustees."

The terms of agreement between the two associations having been fixed upon, after many preliminary conferences and discussions between them, a notice signed by a number of our citizens was given in the papers of the city, for a public meeting of citizens generally and of the proprietors of the Providence Library and Athenæum Companies in particular, to be held at Masonic Hall on the evening of January 25, 1836, for the purpose of carrying the proposed plan into effect. Pursuant to this notice, a public meeting was held, of which Zachariah Allen was appointed chairman, and William S. Patten, Secretary. At this meeting, a draught of "an act to incorporate the Athenæum in Providence," was reported by Wm. R. Staples, and after being amended, was adopted. A committee was, at the same time, appointed to obtain signatures to a petition to be presented to the General Assembly, praying for the passage of the act of incorporation, according to the form adopted by the meeting. This petition, which was signed by a large number of our citizens, sets forth, among other facts, that the Providence Library Company, and the Providence Athenæum, "after mature deliberation, and after ineffectual attempts for a union, have severally resolved to dispose of their Libraries and dissolve their corporations, in case the Honorable Assembly would grant a new charter, for the same objects, to the corporation of each and such others as would join them in applying therefor." In accordance with this petition, an act was passed by the General Assembly at their January session, 1836, to incorporate "The Athenæum in Providence," as the new institution was termed. Quite recently, as will be seen by the amendment to the charter, the name has been changed, the necessity for the first designation, arising from the existence of the former Providence Athenæum, having long since passed away; and this institution is now legally known as the "Providence Athenæum," as in common parlance it had long been called. The act of incorporation contains the names of 283 persons, about one half of whom or their families, still remain proprietors.

The first meeting of the corporation was held on Monday, February 29th, 1836, when the Constitution and a code of By-Laws were adopted, and the Library Regulations were reported and referred back to the Board of Directors, and by them amended and adopted. The first Board of Directors, the Secretary and the Treasurer were chosen at this meeting as follows, Zachariah Allen, William Jenkins, John Carter Brown, Frederick A. Farley, Thomas H. Webb, William S. Patten, Thomas B. Fenner, Owen Mason, William Butler, Amasa Manton, Stephen Tripp, John J. Stimson, Henry Anthony, Directors, Thomas White, Secretary, and William R. Staples, Treasurer. Of these, Amasa Manton declined serving as a Director, and William R. Staples, as Treasurer, and Thomas White, after six months of valuable and disinterested service, resigned the office of Secretary. The Board of Directors filled these vacancies by electing John R. Bartlett, a Director, Stephen Tripp, Treasurer, and Samuel W. Peckham, Secretary, and subsequently elected John Kingsbury, a Director, vice John R. Bartlett, removed from the city, and Charles F. Tillinghast, vice Stephen Tripp, elected Treasurer.

At the first meeting of the Board of Directors, on the 2d of March, Moses B. Ives was elected President, and Zachariah Allen, Vice President, of the Institution. Both of these gentlemen declining to accept, John Pitman was, at a subsequent meeting, elected President, and William G. Goddard, Vice-President. These gentlemen accepted their appointments, and thus the organization of the Board of Directors was completed.

On the ninth of March, a communication from Messrs. Nicholas Brown, and Moses B. and Robert H. Ives, for the estate of Thomas P. Ives, deceased, was received by the Board of Directors, offering "to furnish a lot of land opposite the Town House, at the junction of Benefit and College Streets, for the site of an edifice to be erected of stone or brick for the suitable accommodation of the Athenæum, Historical and Franklin Societies, the lot and building to be owned by the Athenæum, and the other societies to be accommodated therein upon terms to be agreed upon." They also offered, the lot being valued by them at $4000, to pay $6000 towards the erection of such a building, and $4000 towards the purchase of books for the Athenæum, making a total of $14,000, "upon condition that the sum of $10,000 more be made up, to be applied to the same building, and $4000 more towards the purchase of books, by the subscriptions of responsible persons, (and exclusive of moneys received for shares to be sold in the Athenæum) previous to 1st of June next."

This "public-spirited and munificent proposition" was accepted by the Board, by the passage of appropriate resolutions, and a committee was appointed to collect subscriptions in accordance therewith. This committee met with a cordial response on the part of our citizens, and the sum of $15,604,50, or an excess of $1604,50 above the required amount, was shortly obtained. This amount was subscribed by 196 individuals, and (a few) firms, as follows :

Others, together with most of these, manifested their interest, and afforded their aid, by taking shares in the new institution, the price of which was fixed at the low sum of $15. The number of shares subscribed and paid for at the first opening of the books, was 291.

According to the terms of agreement between the two Library Companies, the books of each were to be purchased by the new institution. For those of the Providence Library the sum of one thousand dollars was paid, and by the purchase of the shares of the Providence Athenæum at the rate of twenty-five dollars each, the books, furniture, &c. of that Library became the property of the new Athenæum. The amount of this purchase was $3925. The number of volumes purchased of the Providence Library Company, exclusive of books unbound, broken sets, &c., was 1680, and the number purchased of the Providence Athenæum was 2400, total 4080. After the terms of the purchase of the Providence Athenæum had been agreed upon, many of its stockholders consented to exchange their shares for shares in the new institution, thus adding about $700 to its funds.

The preliminary arrangements having been completed, the new Library was opened to the proprietors on the 10th of October 1836, at the rooms which had been previously occupied, from its commencement, by the former Athenæum, Nos. 42 and 44 on the west side of the second story of the arcade, No. 44 being used for the Library, and the other and smaller apartment for a reading room. The Library hours were at first from 3 to 5 P. M. daily, and Samuel W. Peckham was appointed Librarian. The reading room was soon after fitted up and supplied with periodicals, and opened every evening from 6 to 9 o'clock, the Library being also accessible during same time, and Thomas P. Rodman was appointed superintendent.

In January 1837, the sum of $5000 was invested in stocks of the American and Blackstone Canal Banks, and has remained a permanent fund to the present time.

The first annual meeting of the corporation was held on the fourth Monday of February 1837, when the time for holding the same was changed to the fourth Monday of September.

In the meantime, the subject of the erection of the building by the Athenæum for their own accommodation, and that of the Historical and Franklin Societies, had early engaged the attention of the Board of Directors, and a plan for the same was obtained from Mr. Russell Warren, of this city. This was at first approved by the Board, but was ultimately abandoned; it was found to require an expenditure of money much greater than the sum appropriated. Mr. Warren being then absent from the city, Mr. William Strickland, of Philadelphia, was applied to, and from him a more economical plan was obtained. This plan having been finally adopted, the lot of land was conveyed to the Athenæum as proposed, and Zachariah Allen, John J. Stimson and William S. Patten were appointed by the Board the Building Committee to contract for and superintend the erection of the building. The ground was first broken on the 4th of April 1837, and the building was commenced on the 9th of May, the interval being occupied in excavating and preparing the ground. Samuel B. Durfee, of Providence, was the master mason, and Ebenezer Carpenter, of Providence, took and executed the contract for the carpenters' and joiners' work.

To the Providence Franklin Society was allotted the basement story, upon the following terms, they paying $3000 to the Athenæum and having perpetual occupancy of that portion of the building, with the condition, that if at any time within two years from its completion, they should find the rooms unsuitable for their accommodation, the Athenæum should repay them $1500 on their removal, or if for any adequate cause they should remove after two years, then the Athenæum should pay them such sum, not exceeding $1500, as might be agreed upon, they relinquishing all claim to any part of the building. The basement story was therefore constructed under their direction, as to internal arrangements, and was, for ten years, occupied by them.

The Rhode Island Historical Society were to be accommodated in the East room of the upper or principal story, on condition that they contributed $500 to the funds of the Athenæum. For this reason a thick wall was built dividing that from the other portions of the building, and an independent entrance from College street was designed. But their right to participate in the occupancy of the building was afterwards waived, they preferring to build an edifice exclusively for their own collections, which they have since erected.

In September, 1837, Alexis Caswell and Albert C. Greene were chosen directors by the Board, vice John Kingsbury and William Jenkins, resigned, and in December following, George Baker was chosen a director, vice John C. Brown, resigned.

The building was completed in the spring of 1838, and the Board of Directors first held a meeting there on the 22d of June. On the 2d of July the Board, from a list of forty-five applicants, elected Stephen R. Weeden to the office of Librarian, and during the week following, the books were removed to their new destination.

The dedication of the building by appropriate religious and literary exercises took place at the First Baptist Church on the afternoon of July 11th. A procession, composed of various public bodies, the proprietors of the Athenæum, and citizens generally, was formed at the Library building and proceeded to the church, where a discourse was delivered by Rev. Dr. Wayland, President of Brown University. Rev. Edward B. Hall officiated as chaplain, and odes, written for the occasion, by Thomas P. Rodman and William J. Pabodie, Esqs., were sung by the Providence Glee Club. The Discourse of Dr. Wayland was afterwards published by the Athenæum.

The building was opened for the use of the proprietors on the following Monday, July 16th. It was built in the most substantial manner, as is described in detail in the report of the Building Committee, appended to the third Annual Report. Its cost was about $15,000, and for the incidents of the building, excavations, embankments, fences, &c., about $4,000 more. The total receipts of the institution, at its commencement, from donations, subscriptions, sale of shares, and contribution of the Franklin Society, were between thirty-three and thirty-four thousand dollars. Of this sum, $19,000 were expended on the building and grounds, and $5,000 invested in Bank stock, leaving $9,000 to commence the purchase of books.

The history of the Athenæum, at the period of, and for some time after, its new location, was marked by numerous costly and valuable donations. In September, 1838, were presented, by several of our wealthy and liberal citizens, "The Description of Egypt," and the "Musée Français."* Some of the other donations, received about this time, were as follows: from Samuel Larned, a copy of Stuart's full length Portrait of Washington, executed by an Italian artist, from the original painted for the Marquis of Lansdowne; from Thomas M. Burgess, 59 volumes in the Italian language, beautifully printed, and embracing many of the classics of Italian literature; from Benjamin C. Harris, 21 volumes of Niles' Register, making with those previously owned by the Athenæum, a complete set of that valuable publication; and from Hon. Tristam Burges, 22 folio volumes of American State Papers.

At the annual meeting in September 1839, Amory Chapin and Albert G. Greene were chosen directors, the former in place of William Butler, deceased, and the latter in place of Thomas H. Webb. Mr. Butler was one of the largest subscribers to the funds of the Athenæum, and had always been its earnest friend. Mr. Webb was also one of its earliest supporters, and his donations and services in its behalf did not cease with his removal, at this time, from the city.

During the following year, valuable donations continued to be received. The Washington Insurance Company of this city presented fourteen well bound volumes of newspapers printed about the years 1800—1806, in Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore; and to them the Athenæum has since been indebted for complete files, for many years past, of the "National Intelligencer," and "New-York Shipping and Commercial List." The late Henry Soule bequeathed to the Athenæum a complete file of the "Rhode Island American," published in this city, extending from its commencement, in October, 1808, to February, 1833, a period of twenty-five years; these, with the Providence Journal, since continued from where they leave off, make a complete file of Providence papers for forty-five years. James Phalen presented "Morton's Crania Americana," and ten well executed busts of illustrious personages, the nucleus of a collection which has since been increased. The late Amory Chapin presented a costly and beautifully printed volume, entitled "Public Works of Great Britain." Horatio N. Slater made a valuable donation of two hundred and thirty-six volumes of French Classics, imported by him expressly for the benefit of the Athenæum. Numerous other donations of books were received during this period, and it is to be regretted that in later years they have so nearly ceased. There are many works having high claims to a place in the Library, which, on account of their rarity and price, are beyond the limited means of the Athenæum, but which afford ample opportunity for the exercise of the liberality of our prosperous fellow-citizens.

At the annual meeting in September, 1840, Thomas M. Burgess was chosen a Director, vice Charles F. Tillinghast, resigned.

In April, 1841, the rooms of the Athenæum, with the exception of the east room, were carpeted, at an expense of $300, raised by subscription.

The increase of the Library, at a more rapid rate than had been anticipated, now required that the East room should be prepared for the reception of books; and during the summer of 1841, it was fitted up in a style corresponding with that of the principal room, the proportions of which it does not rival in beauty, although it far exceeds it in comparative extent of accommodation.

In August, 1841, Alexander Duncan and Edward B. Hall were chosen Directors, in place of Frederick A. Farley and Albert C. Greene, resigned, the former in consequence of removing from the city. Mr. Farley was one of the first and most zealous friends of the Athenæum, and was, from its commencement, a faithful and efficient member of its Library Committee.

At the annual meeting in 1840, a vote was passed, requesting the Board of Directors to "adopt such measures as they may deem best fitted to render the annual meetings of the corporation more available in exciting a livelier and more pervading interest in behalf of the Athenæum." With a view to this object, and as one of the most ready means to accomplish it, the Board took measures to provide for the delivery, annually, during the month of September, of a public lecture, to be called "the Athenæum Discourse." After some delay in making the arrangements, the first Discourse was delivered by John Whipple, Esq., on the 10th of November, 1842, to a large audience, in the First Baptist Church, with appropriate religious services by Dr. Wayland, and excellent music adapted to odes written by Albert G. Greene and William J. Pabodie, Esq'rs. Efforts were made for a similar Discourse the ensuing year, but they proved unsuccessful, and the series was not continued.

In September, 1844, Philip Allen, Jr. was elected a Director, vice Amory Chapin, resigned.

In December following, the attention of the Board was directed to an increase of the periodical department. Previously to this, the Athenæum had been in the receipt of twenty-nine periodicals, all but three or four of which were American works or American re-prints. These, although comprising by far the most important portion of the current English literature of this description, were now found insufficient to supply the wants of the proprietors, and eighteen more were added, selected, except four, from the catalogue of British periodicals.

In September, 1845, Samuel W. Peckham, Secretary, and Stephen Tripp, Treasurer, resigned their respective offices, which they had held from the commencement of the institution. These vacancies were filled by the election of Samuel Austin to the former, and Thomas M. Burgess to the latter office. Stephen Tripp and Samuel Osgood were elected Directors, the former in place of Thomas M. Burgess, elected Treasurer, and the latter in place of Thomas B. Fenner, who had recently deceased. Mr. Fenner had been a Director of the Athenæum from the period of its establishment, and had been constant and untiring in his efforts for its prosperity.

In October, 1845, Stephen R. Weeden, on account of ill health, resigned the office of Librarian, which he had filled, to the entire satisfaction of the Board and of the proprietors, for more than seven years. Thomas H. Williams was chosen Librarian in his stead, and has continued to hold that office until the present time.

In the same month, William G. Goddard resigned the office of Vice-President, which he had held for nearly ten years. George Baker was elected to fill the vacancy, and Mr. Goddard took Mr. Baker's place as a Director. Soon after, in February, 1846, this institution and this community sustained an irreparable loss in the death of Mr. Goddard. His services to the Athenæum were invaluable. He was a member of its Library Committee from the commencement, and a large proportion of the additions to the Library testify to his good judgment, fine taste, and liberal scholarship.

In September, 1846, Robert H. Ives was elected a Director in place of Mr. Goddard, and shortly after, Mr. Baker resigning the office of Vice-President, William S. Patten was elected to fill the vacancy, and Mr. Baker took Mr. Patten's place on the Board.

In the year 1847, a large addition was made to the accommodations for books by the erection of shelves in the gallery, affording room for about 5000 volumes. This additional space had become necessary for the proper accommodation of the Library, and is very useful for the disposal of odd volumes, duplicates, and works but seldom used.

In September, 1847, Stephen T. Olney was elected Treasurer, and Isaac Proud, Secretary, vice Thomas M. Burgess and Samuel Austin, resigned.

In September, 1848, Thomas L. Dunnell was chosen a Director, vice Owen Mason, resigned.

For some time previously to this, the Franklin Society had contemplated leaving the basement story of the Athenæum building, on account of serious injury to their collections, from dampness and decay, an evil which had been increasing for years, and which they had frequently brought to the notice of the Athenæum, without, however, either party taking any definite action on the subject. In December, 1848, they gave notice to the Athenæum that they had obtained the refusal of other rooms, and desired to relinquish their perpetual lease. Accordingly, the following agreement, reported by committees of the two associations, was made between them. The Athenæum were to pay to the Franklin Society $1500, in consideration of which the Franklin Society were to surrender the premises and all their right therein to the Athenæum. * The payment was made by giving the note of the Athenæum for that sum, payable five years from January 1, 1849, with interest payable semi-annually, the Athenæum having the right to pay the note at any time after giving thirty days' notice.

By this arrangement, the Athenæum came into possession of the whole building. Amply sufficient space was thus afforded for its growing wants, and the unity of purpose to which the edifice was now appropriated, bestowed upon it and upon the institution occupying it, an additional force and dignity. The new space thus acquired was mostly appropriated to the formation of a new reading room, for which immediate measures were taken to prepare it, the one previously in use having been for some time too small to accommodate the proprietors, whose interest in that department had been much increased by the large accession made to the list of periodicals.

* It may not be improper to remark, that the intercourse between the Athenæum and the Franklin Society had always been most friendly, a large number of persons being members of both associations, and that this local separation did not at all weaken the fraternal sympathies that so closely bind together the devotees of Literature and of Science.

In February 1849, the Athenæum lost one of its earliest friends, in the death of Stephen Tripp, who was for so many years, from the foundation of the institution, its able and faithful Treasurer, and who, since his resignation of that office, had remained in its service as a Director. The vacancy thus caused in the Board was filled by the election of Samuel W. Peckham.

At the annual meeting in September 1849, Zachariah Allen and Samuel Osgood resigned their places as Directors, the latter in consequence of his removal from the city. Both these gentlemen had rendered efficient service to the Athenæum, Mr. Allen as one of the Building Committee, and as a Director for more than thirteen years; and Mr. Osgood's services, especially as a member of the Library Committee, had been of the highest value. Their places were filled by the election of Henry A. Rogers, and Abraham Payne. At the same meeting, Albert J. Jones was chosen Secretary, vice Isaac Proud resigned.

In the fall of this year the building was first lighted with gas. The increasing expenditures for this and other purposes, the obligation to repay the Franklin Society, and the necessity of making extensive alterations and repairs, in order to use the additional room just acquired, threatened to absorb the ordinary income for the ensuing year, and leave little or nothing for the increase of the Library. In this state of things, a munificent donation gave a new impulse to the affairs of the institution, like that which it received at its commencement, and enabled it to go on in its accustomed prosperous course. Alexander Duncan, Esq., by letter dated November 5, 1849, gave to the Athenæum, in the name of the late Cyrus Butler, the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars, to be appropriated as follows: six thousand dollars to be added to its permanent fund, the income only to be used, and the remaining four thousand to be applied to the payment of the note due to the Franklin Society, and to carry forward, as far as might be, the establishment of a Reading Room, and other alterations and repairs in the basement. Appropriate resolutions were passed by the Board, upon the reception of this communication, and application having been made to Mr. Duncan for permission to take a copy of a portrait of Mr. Butler, he kindly presented the original one which adorns the Library room. Agreeably to the terms of this donation, the sum of six thousand dollars, to be called the "Butler Donation Fund," was invested in bonds of the Providence and Worcester Rail Road Co., and the note due to the Franklin Society was paid.

The Athenæum was thus relieved from debt, its permanent funds were more than doubled, and ample means were provided to defray the extra expense of the repairs and alterations now to be made.

Shortly afterwards, Messrs. Patten, Stimson, Greene and Dunnell were appointed a committee, by the Board of Directors, "to reconstruct the basement story of the Athenæum, and to connect the same with the principal story, so as to provide a suitable Reading Room and other needed rooms for the use of the Athenæum."

The work was accordingly commenced, the central partitions in the lower story being removed and replaced by iron pillars, thus throwing the two principal rooms into one, and the two rear rooms also into one. The floor was thoroughly drained, to remedy the dampness which had been so injurious, and a connecting stairway was constructed, leading from the centre of the principal room below to that of the Library Room above.

In February, 1850, Stephen T. Olney, the Treasurer, resigned his office, and Henry Anthony was chosen for the remainder of the official year.

In July, 1850, Dr. N. A. Fisher presented a portrait, by Alexander, of Dr. James G. Percival, the poet.

In September, 1850, Henry T. Beckwith was chosen Treasurer, vice Henry Anthony, resigned.

In connexion with the alterations and repairs in the basement, now going on, a new system of heating by means of hot water was introduced, the water being conveyed in six inch pipes placed along the base-boards upon the upper and lower floors throughout the building. The advantages of this mode of warming, over that by a furnace, are, superior cleanliness, a saving of fuel, less liability in the apparatus to get out of order, or to need extensive repairs, and a more agreeable heat.

The work upon the basement having been completed, it was first used as a Reading Room in the fall of 1851. The upper part of the building was then thoroughly repaired, and newly painted and carpeted throughout, and the whole establishment, Library and Reading Room, was thrown open to the proprietors in April, 1852.

Various changes had from time to time been made in the code of By-Laws which had existed from the foundation of the institution. This fact, and the new state of things consequent upon the possession by the Athenæum of the basement story, and the opening of the new Reading Room, required that they should be thoroughly revised, and re-printed. A new code of By-Laws was accordingly prepared by a committee of the Board of Directors, with careful reference to those in use in similar institutions in our own country and in Europe, and were adopted, with some amendments, at an unusually full meeting of the proprietors, held for that purpose, May 17th, 1852.

An Assistant Librarian, who should devote his whole time, during Library hours, to the service of the Athenæum, was now required, and Mr. Joseph B. Wheaton was appointed to that place.

To this Historical Sketch may be added a few items more, illustrative of the character and condition of the institution and explanatory of the Catalogue which is now published.

The Athenæum occupies a commodious and beautiful building, in a central situation, and safe as regards danger from fire. It is of the Grecian Doric order of architecture, built of granite, forty-eight feet in width, and seventy-eight feet in depth, consisting of a basement and principal story. The front is of fine hammered Quincy granite, and has a recess supported by two fluted granite columns, fourteen feet high, each shaft in one piece. The side walls are of rough granite, from Johnston, in this State, and the rear is of rough stone wall, plastered. The roof is covered with zinc.

The lower or basement story has two commodious entrances, one at the north and one at the south, the latter comunicating by a staircase with the upper part of the building. The height of this story is ten and a half feet, and it contains two rooms. The largest and the one first entered is thirty-six by forty-three feet, and the rear one is twenty by forty-three feet. The first mentioned forms a commodious Reading Room, and a stairway in the centre connects it with the Library above. The rear room is appropriated to a more convenient arrangement and display, than it has hitherto been possible to make, of maps, charts, engravings, and large illustrated works.

The upper or principal story has its principal entrance in front, approached over a bank with steps at each end, and steps in the centre of the building, conducting to an entry, eight feet wide by thirteen feet long, on each side of which, and communicating with it, is a room thirteen by eighteen feet, one formerly used as the Reading Room, and now as the Librarian's Room, the other for Directors' meetings, committees, &c.

The Library, or principal room, is entered through the front entry or through either of the rooms just mentioned. It is eighteen feet high, thirty-two feet long by forty-three wide on the floor, and about forty-four feet long by forty-three wide from within about seven feet below and up to the ceiling; this difference in length is caused by the space, forming the gallery before mentioned, left over the Librarian's and Directors' rooms, which are ten feet high. The east room, so called, in the rear of the Library room, and entered through it, is eighteen feet high, and twenty by forty-three feet in dimensions, and contains a part of the Library. Both these rooms are furnished with ornamental and convenient alcoves for the accommodation of the books.

The number of volumes that can be accommodated in the Library, with the present arrangements, is about 25,000, and these accommotions could be greatly increased, by enlarging, and changing the disposition of the alcoves, and by occupying the basement story.

The Library of the Athenæum contains many rare and valuable works, besides those heretofore named as donations, such as Audubon's larger work on the Birds of America, his work on Quadrupeds, Boydell's Shakspeare, American edition, Biographie Universelle, and others, which will be found on the Catalogue. It has been selected with great care, the intention having been, while a sufficient amount of current entertaining literature has been furnished for miscellaneous readers, to employ by far the larger portion of the Library fund in the purchase of books of substantial merit and permanent value. The departments of History, Biography, and Voyages and Travels, considering the size of the Library, are richly supplied. Particular attention has been paid to the department of Periodicals, of which the Library contains about 2800 volumes, and pains have been taken to procure complete sets of the most valuable. The Athenæum is now in the receipt of 59 foreign and American Periodicals, and ten newspapers, three of the former in the French language.

The Providence Athenæum is the cheapest institution of its class in the country. There is none other worthy to be compared with it, in which the shares are so low, and only one as large, in which the annual tax is lower. The greatest freedom exists in the sale and transfer of shares, the price of which is $15, and the annual tax on which cannot, by the constitution, exceed five dollars, and has never been less. The books, except the most costly illustrated and other works, and such as are solely works of reference, and unbound periodicals, are freely circulated.

The average annual increase of the Library since its commencement, exclusive of the two old Libraries, has been 875 volumes, and the average annual amount expended for books, during the same period, including periodicals and binding, has been about $1,550. The following table, corrected and continued from one prepared for the eleventh Annual Report, in September, 1846, gives a concise and comprehensive view of the growth and expenses of the institution from its commencement until September, 1852:

The permanent funds of the institution amount to $11,000, invested in Bank Stock and in Bonds of the Providence and Worcester Railroad Co., yielding an annual income of $710. The whole annual income of the institution is as follows:

Assessment on shares, say at present, - - - - -	$2,780
Dividends, fines, and yearly sales of shares, say, - - -	1,000
	$3,780

* This increase was owing to the impulse received from the completion and occupation of the Athenæum Building.

† The more than usual increase in these years was owing to the exertions of committees appointed by the proprietors.

‡ The present number of proprietors is 519, owning 553 shares.

The annual reports of the Board of Directors are always published, giving to the public, from time to time, the fullest information on the condition and progress of the institution. Copies of the first eight of these reports, with Dr. Wayland's Discourse at the opening of the building, and the first two Catalogues, were bound together some years since, and entitled "Athenæum Documents."

The unusual expenses, including the publication of this Catalogue, which have for some time past diminished the Library fund, being now nearly finished, the increase of the Library will in future, it is hoped, be more rapid than it has been of late years.

The Athenæum possesses three portraits, which have been heretofore mentioned, and seventeen busts of distinguished persons, which adorn the tops of the alcoves in the Library rooms. Specimens of the fine arts have been occasionally placed on exhibition here, which have tended to render the rooms more attractive, but the structure of the building does not afford space for any extended display.

Two Catalogues have been heretofore published, the first in 1837, containing 3,950 volumes, the second in 1839, called the first Supplementary Catalogue, containing 3,012 volumes, making together about 7,000 volumes.

The present Catalogue contains those comprised in the two preceding ones, and all those added since, up to September, 1852, except duplicates and pamphlets. It consists of two parts, a Descriptive Catalogue, and an Alphabetical Index of Subjects.

In the Descriptive Catalogue, the books are entered under the authors' names. The authors' names are arranged alphabetically, in large capitals, and the different works by the same author are arranged alphabetically according to their titles. Periodicals, Collectanea, and books the authors of which were unknown, are entered alphabetically, in small capitals, by the first word of the title which is not an article. No book is entered according to its subject. In a few instances, where volumes consist of a collection of tracts or pamphlets bound up together, they are entered by descriptive titles, either found on their covers, or made for the occasion. A strict adherence to these principles of arrangement has been intended, but slight departures therefrom, have, in some instances, been unavoidable, and in others, may have escaped notice. To facilitate references from the Index, the titles are numbered from the top to the bottom of each page.

The Index is very full, and is, to a certain extent, although not according to any bibliographical system, classified as well as alphabetical.

Much care and labor have been bestowed to make the Catalogue worthy of the Library which it represents, and it is believed that an intelligent and faithful use of it will reveal more fully to the proprietors, the treasures of literature, science, and art which they possess.

A critical eye will undoubtedly detect errors, but none have been discovered which will mislead, or which are important enough to be mentioned.

The number of volumes included in this Catalogue is about 17,300, and the whole number of volumes in the Library at this date is about 18,000.

Providence Athenæum, August, 1853.
